ABOUT THE COVER PHOTOS

Top Left: With the Indiana spring turkey season fast approaching, turkey hunters are getting fired up, tuning up their gear and practicing their calling techniques. Around our house each spring, my wife's eye rolls are plenty as Nicholas and I break out various types of calls and do our best to sound like lovesick hens and eager gobblers. See Page 8 (Photo by Joe Martino) / Also Top Left: With turkey season quickly approaching, hunters are anticipating a successful season. They are patterning their shotguns, honing in their calling techniques, and revisiting hunting properties to gain permission. Hunters also need to be equipped with basic safety guidelines, not only for their safety but that of other hunters enjoying the sport. See Page 7 (New column by C.O. Travis Stewart on Turkey Hunting)

Plunge exceeded our expectations. It took 5 years to convince Indiana Special Olympics to allow us to host the plunge at Whitewater Memorial State Park. To our surprise we had 118 plungers and raised nearly $25,000. See Page 14-15 (Photo by Lonnie Snow)
Bottom Left: Every year about this time I begin thinking about mushrooms. But my record of successful mushroom hunts are dwindling year by year. My biggest problem is when the perfect time arrives I am too busy to go to the woods. When I finally get out it's either too late or the area I hunt has been thoroughly picked through. (Gad-a-bout File Photo)

I want to introduce Conservation and Public Information Officer Travis Stewart who will be appearing in The Gad-a-bout starting with this issue. Conservation Officer Travis Stewart was highly recommended by Captain Bill Browne, Public Information Officer of the Department of Natural Resources, who is now Public Information Officer (PIO) for the entire state of Indiana. Conservation Officer Travis Stewart follows in the footsteps of Conservation Officer Gary Catron and Public Information Officer Captain Bill Browne who have kept the readers of The Gad-a-bout up to date on activities and important information concerning the Indiana Outdoors.

PIO TRAVIS STEWART

Travis Stewart attended Vincennes University where he graduated in 2011 with an Associate of Sciences degree for Conservation Law Enforcement. He became a Conservation Officer in 2012, working for the DNR Law Enforcement Division. He was first assigned to Fayette County, where he's been ever since. He's worked a span of investigations from: traffic violations, illegally taking deer, to a multiple theft investigation on State Property.

ICO Stewart became a Division Spokesperson a short time later, and continues to carry out those responsibilities; ranging from multimedia pages to news companies.

ICO Stewart works with fellow Law Enforcement agencies to create a relationship based on community. He strives to educate the public in many different fashions from education courses to public appearances.

ICO Stewart married his wife in 2016. They are happily married and are able to enjoy the outdoors together. They both have started to fly fish, and enjoy the calmness it brings to both of them. He is an avid hunter, and has created a passion within his wife to participate in hunting as well. They have one daughter together, who keeps them busy. She may be young, but she loves to be outside and playing in the water.

THE POTAWATOMI TRAIL OF DEATH STORY WRITTEN BY SHIRLEY WILLARD WHICH HAS APPEARED SINCE JANUARY ENDS THIS MONTH

Part 4 begins on Page 28 and ends on Page 30.

In the February Gad-a-bout I had a photo of Potawatomi dancers in it that had the wrong information under the photo. Below is the photo with the correct information under it.

Correction for caption that appeared with this photo in the February Gad-a-bout. It should have read, "Tracy Locke and daughter Erin with Susan Campbell, all Citizen Potawatomi Nation members, dance at Trail of Courage in 2008. Behind them are Head Dancers, Beverly Levier (Red Bear) Barnhill and Glenn (Red Knife) Barnhill, Bloomington, Illinois.

I've enjoyed having Shirley Willard's Potawatomi "Trail of Death march: Sept. - Nov. 1838" reprinted in The Gad-a-bout. I've had many comments from readers concerning her story. Part 1 appeared in the January 2017 Gad-a-bout; Part 2 appeared in the February 2017 Gad-a-bout; Part 3 appeared in the March 2017 Gad-a-bout and the final Part 4 appears in this issue.

If you haven't been able to read all of the parts, you can log onto my website www.thegadabout.com and read them for free, just click onto the heading Archives and scroll down and select January, February, March and April 2017. The two selections are Low Resolution (Dial up) and High Resolution (Broad Band, DSL or other High Speed internet). To contact Shirley Willard call 574-223-2352 or wwillard@rtcol.com.

2016 1940-1963 BASKETBALL BASH HELD FEBRUARY 6, 2016 SPARKED AN IDEA BY MARY LOU GRIFFEY TO WRITE A BOOK "THE GOAL"

Mary Lou Griffey, RHS Alumni Association Executive Director contacted me last year concerning the 2016 1940-1963 Basketball Bash she and other leading citizens of Wayne County wanted to celebrate the basketball teams of Wayne County before he consolidation of the schools in 1963. The event was held at the Wayne County Historical Museum on February 6 and was a huge success. From that event Mary Lou Griffey has written a book entitled "The Goal, The Towns, The Teams, The

by Tag Nobbe

Professional Fishing Guide

well after dark. Get yourself a good black light and spool up with some type of clear blue fluorescent line around 12 lb. will do. The black light will make this line glow as bright as a light bulb at night. This is tremendously helpful when casting. You should have a few different types of bait on hand. The first bait should be some type of suspending bait. What you do is just get within casting distance to where you think the fish are holding in, and cast across it. This really is just a leap of faith that they are there. When the bait hits the water reel it down a few cranks and pause it then twitch it with the rod tip and pause it again and crank twitch pause. Don't be afraid to pause for 10 seconds sometime this is what it takes. When you move into an area try to give it a wide berth, you don't want to spook the fish off if they are already there.

As you are fishing around the area keep a watchful eye on your depth finder. If you're seeing fish close to the bottom and you're not getting bit on the surface change to a bait you can fish on the bottom. I would suggest a 1/16 ounce painted lead head jig tipped with a bass minnow. Here what you do is make a long cast over the area where you saw fish on the bottom. Let the bait sink to the bottom and do your best to swim it back to the boat while keeping it just above the bottom. If you don't get bit try stopping the bait and starting it, sometimes this will draw a strike. If you still don't get bit, try changing the color of the lead head jig, add a 3-inch curly tail to the mix. I have found over the years that a glow head jig will also do the trick.

The last method that I would try is fishing straight up and down right below the boat. This style of fishing will get the bait in their face and keep it there. What I would use is a jigging rapala or some type of blade bait. We started out using these baits in the winter time. What I have found out is in the winter all the bugs, worm's, craw dads and the like are all hibernating, due to the cold temperature of the water. Well in April the water temperature is still in the fifties and all the bugs, worms and craw dads are still hibernating. So, the only thing these fish have to feed on is other fish. The best way to fish a jigging rapala is a simple lift and drop. The fish will usually hit it on the fall. You can fish a blade bait the same way, but you can also cast it out and frog hop it back to the boat. Either way the fish will usually hit it on the fall.

All this type of fishing is due to the spawning cycle of the walleye. As soon as it gets dark the male and female walleye are drawn to rocky areas or areas where there is current. Some fish hold off the shore, some hold on the bottom close to shore and some are right on the shore with their dorsal fins sticking out of the water. But as soon as it gets light this all ends. This lasts for around 2 weeks then there is about a week of what I like to call the recuperation period. They are nowhere near the shore at night and you can't catch them anywhere not at night and not during the day. Then all the sudden the bite is on, but now it's not at night it's during the day. This is all driven by the water temperature, so it varies a bit from year to year. Good luck see you on the lake or at 52 Pik-up.

April Fishing Brookville Lake

April is the month that things really start to change in the fish world. The water temperature is just coming out of the forties into the fifties. The walleye have been spawning in the lake for about a week, and all the other fish are just trying to warm up. April is the transition month for most fish, but for the walleye the transition month was March. If your going to try to catch walleye out of the lake in April, you need to fish in the dark. The reason for this is due to their spawning style. Up all night carousing around, sleep all day. What you're looking for are rocky spots or places with current. Don't even put the boat on the water till

News from the Indiana State Police

Public Information/Recruiting Officer

Two New Troopers Start Patrol in the Pendleton District

Pendleton - Pendleton – On Valentine’s Day morning probationary troopers from the 76th Indiana State Police Recruit Academy class, that graduated 10/20/2016, were issued their first state police cars at the Indiana State Police Youth Education and Historical Center in Indianapolis.

Two of those troopers are assigned to the Indiana State Police Pendleton District and are starting solo patrol in the district. The probationary officers recently completed a three month field training period with veteran troopers. They will serve a one year probationary period before attaining permanent status as a trooper.

In addition to the field training, the new officers received approximately 917 hours of structured training in law enforcement techniques when they were assigned to the Indiana State Police Recruit Academy. The curriculum included criminal law instruction, emergency vehicle operations training, psychology, and survival Spanish. They also developed skills in criminal investigation, vehicle crash investigation, and impaired driver prevention and detection

The newest members of the Pendleton State Police Post are Mark Dupart, age 27 of Henry County, and J.T. Burns, age 27 also of Henry County. Dupart graduated from Shenandoah High School in 2007 and was in the U.S. Army from 2007-2014. He will be assigned to patrol in Wayne, Fayette and Union Counties.

J.T. Burns graduated from New Castle High School in 2007 and worked as an EMT and Paramedic for New Castle EMS, until attending the State Police Academy. Burns will also be assigned to patrol Wayne, Fayette and Union Counties.

Watch Out for Meth Trash

I always warn hunters and fisherman every spring to watch out for meth labs and toxic meth trash left behind by meth addicts. Signs to look for Meth manufacturing are a strong ammonia smell, or a solvent smell like an auto body shop. Look for air compressor type rubber tubing; ether or camp fuel cans; drain cleaner bottles; plastic soda pop bottles, of all sizes, that will have clear liquid with floating metal chips or a white residue; empty Pseudoephedrine packages and blister packs; lithium battery casings; propane tanks with a blue or green discoloration around the valve and used coffee filters with white or reddish-pink residue or sludge. The chemicals can be highly explosive with fumes that are toxic to breath and will damage internal organs.

If you’re out fishing or hunting and encounter an unattended back pack or gym bag, or trash that looks suspicious, don’t disturb or move it. Contact your local Indiana State Police Post, or call the Drug Tip Line at 1-800-453-4756 or your local law enforcement agency to let us check it out. The Indiana Meth Investigation System or IMIS, can also take tips on meth labs. Just go to www.meth.in.gov and click on the “Report Suspected Meth Activity” Link. Tips can be made and kept anonymous.

“Secondary Crashes” in Stopped Traffic Remains a Dangerous Issue

This winter has proven that secondary crashes are still happening at an alarming rate and are usually deadly. A secondary crash is an incident that occurs as a direct or indirect result of a previous incident. All it takes sometimes is a broke down vehicle or minor crash to cause a traffic slow down or stoppage. Remember, for every minute traffic is slowed or stopped it will take four minutes to clear up, so a minor incident can lead to a lengthy traffic slow down. A good tip is if approaching a construction zone, expect a traffic slow down or stoppage. Really, it’s a good idea to always think about and look for a traffic slow down or stoppage, anytime you drive on the interstate. Don’t be distracted by electronic devices. If you need to talk, check emails or adjust your radio or GPS, pull over. Don’t risk your life and the lives of others.

Drive according to the road and traffic conditions. My main advice, which is always true whether in a weather event or in heavy traffic, is to increase following distance and decrease your speed. If you find yourself in stopped traffic, leave at least a car length between you and the car in front of you and watch the traffic approaching from behind. Be ready to take evasive action if things go bad behind you.

IN-TIME (INdiana-Traffic Incident Management Effort) is a multi-discipline effort with the purpose of having traffic incident responders, from all disciplines, following agreed-upon policies and procedures focused on the Open Roads Philosophy.

First Responders, after ensuring their own personal safety and the safety and security of any incident victims, have as their top priority reducing congestion and the higher risk of secondary incidents for public/motorist safety. For more information on secondary crashes and IN-Time, visit their web site at <http://www.in.gov/intime/2338.htm>.

Stolen Construction Equipment Recovered

Anderson – Around 6:30 p.m. on February 20th the Pendleton State Police Post received a call from a man who said he had just found some stolen construction equipment at an address in Anderson. The man said the equipment had been stolen earlier in the day from the company where he works. Trooper Dana Harvey responded to the address and could see a skid loader on the property from the road.

A search warrant for the property in the 4000 block of north SR9 was obtained, and officers ended up recovering several pieces of construction equipment that were listed as stolen. Two skid loaders, five stolen trucks and two wreckers, all in different stages of disassembly, were recovered at the property, along with new building supplies that included bath tubs, toilets and sinks, as well as an assortment of hand tools.

Later, troopers served a search warrant on a remote property on Layton Rd. in Anderson. Investigators ended up locating two stolen excavators and two more stolen trucks. Six trailers, all stolen, were also recovered between both properties. Several pieces of the large stolen construction equipment and tools, along with some of the trailers and trucks, have been returned to their owners.

But investigators and the Madison County Prosecutor’s Office are asking for the public’s help. If anyone has any information about the stolen equipment, or if any contractors in central Indiana have recently had any construction site supplies like hand tools, bath tubs or shower stalls stolen, please call the Pendleton State Police Post for Detective Tony Klettheimer, or Detective David Preston at 765-778-2121.

At this point investigators say a conservative estimate would value the recovered stolen property at just over $500,000. No arrests have been made at this time and the investigation remains ongoing. ■

Turkey Hunting Are You Safely Prepared?

Hello Indiana. My name is Indiana Conservation Officer Travis Stewart and I am a Public Information Officer operating out of District 9 and I look forward to writing this column for the Gad-A-Bout. I will be bringing you enjoyment with stories, insight with safety tips, and news about the natural resources that Indiana has to offer.

With turkey season quickly approaching, hunters are anticipating a successful season. They are patterning their shotguns, honing in their calling techniques, and revisiting hunting properties to gain permission. Hunters also need to be equipped with basic safety guidelines, not only for their safety but that of other hunters enjoying the sport.

I still remember the first turkey I had the pleasure of harvesting several years ago. On the second day of season, my father and I were hunting a wooded property he'd been going to for many years. We'd hunkered down with our backs to a giant maple tree and an opening to our front. The tree was positioned on a hill rise, which dropped off to a river at the bottom. Shortly after sunrise, we hit the slate call and were rewarded with the reassurance of a tom in the area. Shortly later, we heard him pitch off roost and continue in our direction.

After a nerve wrenching silence, the leaves to our front started to rustle and the head of a turkey appeared over the rise. I positioned myself and gun in the direction and waited. Once he crested the rise, he flared his fan and gobbled. I positioned my front bead on target and assured no other turkeys had followed in his footsteps and the shot to be safe. By taking these safety precautions, I was rewarded with a bearded tom.

What follows is a few basic safety precautions to ensure you have a safe hunt.

Firearms Safety

All hunters born after December 31, 1986 are required to pass a Hunter Safety Course to procure a hunting license. During that course, participants delve into multiple aspects of firearms safety, a key component being the Ten Commandments of Firearms Safety. One major Commandment states: to be sure of your target and what is in front and beyond it. Following this can prevent a hunter from aiming down the barrel and shooting at a turkey, as well as shooting another hunter at the same time. This can also eliminate a hunter from harvested a second turkey that followed close behind the first.

Avoid Wearing Red, White and Blue Colored Clothing

These are the dominate colors associated with the markings of a tom turkey's head. Most hunters pay close attention to the red of a tom's head to differentiate it from a hen. An exposed white t-shirt or sock can give a mistaken hunter the thought of a turkey being present. Also if using a handkerchief in these colors, make sure it is completely covered and stored away.

Stalking Turkey and Movement in the Woods

Stalking a tom's gobble through the woods or field is a technique some hunters use. This technique should be avoided all together. While it may provide an easy way to find a tom, it can also make the hunter a target for an eager hunter. The movements generated from stalking through brush can be mistaken as game walking through the woods, as turkey hunters generally wear fully camouflaged clothing and are hard to be seen.

Along with this, using a gobble call can be as dangerous. These calls can stir the excitement of other hunters wanting to get a jump on the tom. If using a gobble call, make sure you are in a safe location.

If you have to change positions while in the field, do so in a normal human posture. Stand upright and use well established trails.

Position

Hunters should position themselves against a tree that covers themselves from their head down, and is as wide as their shoulders. Hunters should also have 180 degrees of clear sight to their front. Keeping this position will proved protection to their backside or even conceal them to a turkey that sneaks in.

When using decoys, position them at a safe distance from yourself. Don't place a decoy so close to you that it would put in direct line with an unsuspecting hunter who took a foul shot. You should also be able to see beyond your decoy. If moving the decoy from one spot to another or out of the woods, keep it covered and in your bag.

Other Hunters

If you encounter another hunter in the woods, signal them with a clear and loud voice. Never use your turkey calls to make your position known. Never use a waving motion or movement to get their attention.

Bringing Your Turkey Home

If you are one of the lucky hunters who gets to harvest their turkey, make sure to get it out of the woods safely. You can cover your bird with fluorescent orange or place it inside your bag or vest. Make sure that the bird is completely covered and never carry it out without doing so. If you fail to follow this step, your successful hunt may turn deadly.

Last Words of Advice

As Conservation Officers, we want to ensure hunters are being safe and enjoying what our state has to offer. We also want to establish our hunting society as an ethical one that will serve as a stepping stone for generations to come. Hunters can do this in many ways, which would be an article of its own. A few tips to being an ethical hunter can include having sportsmanship to other hunters or even those who wish not to participate. Be respectful of the property you have permission to hunt and leave it better than the way it was when you arrived. If someone is legally in "your hunting spot", try a different location.

Wounded Veteran Turkey Hunt Opportunity

I would like to pass along information for any wounded veteran who has difficulties getting into the woods to enjoy this sport. There is an opportunity in Fayette County for a guided turkey hunt on private property to any wounded veteran. The hunt will be by the aid of a specially designed blind that is wheel chair accessible.

Steve Davis of Fayette County is offering his assistance and blind to the recipient of this hunt. Steve suffered an injury that caused him to become quadriplegic and since created this specially designed blind.

If any reader wishes to participate or knows anyone that would like to participate in the hunt contact myself, ICO Travis Stewart, at the following email address: tstewart@dnr.in.gov. Further inquiries or questions can be made through the same email address.

Lastly, if you encounter an issue with another hunter call ICO Central Dispatch at 812-837-9536 or 1-800-TIP-IDNR. ■

In order to bag a gobbler packing spurs the likes of these, you better not blow your chances before hand. A good rule of thumb is; Never blow a turkey call unless you intend to kill a turkey. It seems pretty simple, yet thousands of turkey hunters make things harder on themselves each year by trying to get gobblers to respond to calls before the season even starts. That's a big no-no. If you need to locate gobblers while scouting, use a crow call to try to get them to shock-gobble. Understand, though, that eventually they will quit responding to those as well. (Author Photos)

Indiana Outdoors

by Joe Martino

Don't blow your turkey season before it starts, Use your head, not your calls prior to the opener

With the Indiana spring turkey season fast approaching, turkey hunters are getting fired up, tuning up their gear and practicing their calling techniques. Around our house each spring, my wife's eye rolls are plenty as Nicholas and I break out various types of calls and do our best to sound like lovesick hens and eager gobblers. Besides the eye rolls, we may also get pushed outside onto the porch as she exclaims that she has heard enough of it throughout the last few weeks! Oh well, being outside gives a better idea of how our calling will actually sound in the woods anyway. And I am sure that our calling will not bother our neighbor as much as it does Tracy anyway. Although our beagles do not seem all that thrilled with it either, and it is sometimes difficult to hear what our calls sound like over their howling..

Anyway, back to the moral of this story. Practicing your calling is important (and, yes, it is fun) so that you can masterfully replicate the sounds of the wild turkey as best you can when it becomes game time. There is a time and a place for everything though. Just as calling inside the house can sometimes get on Tracy's nerves and is not always the wisest and safest thing for us to do, calling in the areas that you plan on hunting in a few weeks is not so bright either, for different reasons.

Travel down any back road in April and you are sure to run into people pulling over on the side of the road and blowing on a turkey call in hopes of getting a gobbler to fire off. They do this to locate the tom and learn his whereabouts or roosting area prior to the opener. Little do they know that by doing so, they are making the hunting considerably tougher, not only for themselves, but others as well by doing so.

Under no circumstance should you ever use a turkey call in the wild call unless you are actually hunting and intent on killing a turkey. Every time you do, you run the risk of educating the birds in your area. Let's say you are out scouting and just cannot resist giving a few yelps to see if anything responds. Whether a gobbler does or does not fire back, if he heard it and comes in to investigate, or worse yet, notices you, then you have pretty much just eliminated that bird from your hit list because the odds are long that he will readily come into a call again.

If you just have to try to make a tom gobble, only do so with the use of calls designed to "shock" him into gobbling, rather than ones designed to draw him in. A crow call, for example, is a commonly used locator call which is designed to pierce the air and make a gobbler gobble. It is used to locate the bird but will not entice him to come investigate, and therefore is fairly harmless when used in this manner. Be advised though, that eventually turkeys can get used to such calls and respond less and less to them over time.

Honestly though, especially during early mornings and evenings as the birds are in the roost, gobblers will tend to gobble often enough on their own for you to be able to figure out their roosting areas. And they will typically continue to gobble for a while after they fly down in the mornings and slightly prior to flying up to roost the evenings, enabling you to figure out their habits without the use of calls.

Part of the excitement of the spring turkey season is getting ready for it. The anticipation and locating birds gets your blood pumping and fills your head full of dreams that keep you from sleeping at night for several days before the season arrives. Do not let this excitement spoil your chances at a longbeard this year by getting antsy and blowing your cover and educating the birds in your hunting area. ■

BOAT SALES TO SURGE

The National Marine Manufacturers Association, representing the nation's recreational boat, engine and marine accessory manufacturers, announced it expects sales of new powerboats to increase between six and seven percent this year. They expect new boat sales to be around 250,000 units. This projection is based on consumer confidence index numbers soaring and manufacturers looked to remain more liquid during the Obama years. New yachts and cruisers are expected to have seen gains between one and three percent in 2016, and that trend is likely to continue into 2017 as consumer confidence and spending remain strong.

*Affordable, versatile boats are helping a new generation become boaters. Manufacturers are making smaller boats (waterspouts boats, pontoons, day boats, etc.) to be more affordable and attract new, younger boaters and even more sales. What's more, boats are also becoming more introducing products attracting younger boaters. In addition to new boat sales increases, overall recreational boating industry dollar sales are expected to increase between 10-11 percent from the $8.4 billion spent in 2016.

Boats are one of the few all-American industries left. Ninety-five percent of boats sold in the U.S. are made in the U.S. If these numbers are correct recreational boating will see some of its healthiest gains in nearly a decade, a trajectory the NMMA expects to continue through 2018.

Economic indicators are working in the industry's favor. A continuously improving housing market, strong consumer confidence, growing disposable income and consumer spending, and low interest rates all contribute to a healthy recreational boating market.

Heading into 2017, U.S. manufacturers have geared up for a busy winter and spring boat show season to further attract the growing number of boating enthusiasts. Boat shows provide a platform for the boating industry to unveil its latest innovations around the country, and generate as much as 50 percent of annual sales for some manufacturers and dealers. They're also the best time for consumers to shop. Dealers and manufacturers offer some of their most attractive incentives and deals, while giving shoppers the chance to compare different boats, and different dealers, all in one location. The shows also provide a glimpse of buyer trends and sales for the year ahead:

BOATING TRENDS

*Big boats are back. One of the more standout areas of growth in 2016 was among yachts and large cruising boats, a category that has been slower to rebound as high net worth individuals versatile, providing an all-in-one experience from fishing to cruising to waterspouts, making them more appealing to a wider audience.

*Intuitive marine technology: The boating industry has embraced new technology from docking a boat with a joystick reminiscent of video games. As consumers turn to their smart phones to manage numerous aspects of their lives, manufacturers are responding and will unveil boats at 2017 boat shows that provide a more intuitive experience; one that makes certain aspects of operating a boat as simple as pushing a button.

*Shared experiences: The "sharing economy" isn't lost on the boating industry. They are welcoming the opportunity to expose a new demographic to life on the water with everything from boat rental apps to shared boat ownership. Companies like Boatsetter, Boatbound, Sailo and GetMyBoat are some of the options listed on the industry's www.DiscoverBoating.com, which helps beginners find ways to get on the water.

It's not just new boats Americans are buying; there were an estimated 958,000 pre-owned boats (powerboats, personal watercraft, and sailboats) sold last year. There were an estimated 12.1 million registered boats in the U.S. Ninety-five percent of boats on the water (powerboats, personal watercraft, and sailboats) in the U.S. are small in size at less than 26 feet in length - boats that can be trailered by a vehicle to local waterways.

Boating is predominantly "middle-class" with 72 percent of boat owners having a household income of less than $100,000. Ninety-five percent of all Americans live within an hour's drive of a navigable body of water.

THE ISTA held its fur sale FEBRUARY 11, 2017 at the Miami County 4-H Fairgrounds. We even had a few indoor vendors who did a lively business based on their requests for "Change." There were 993 skins sold, and ten (10) skins withdrawn from the sale. While this sale was a long way from the sales of just a few years ago, it was an optimistic sale, as you can see from the table below.

Indiana Slab Masters

by Jim Raymer

President & Founder of the Indiana Slabmasters

Tanners Creek ISM 2017 Classic Site

This year the Indiana Slab Masters have selected Tanners Creek as the 2017 Classic Site. For those of you that have never ventured to the Tanners Creek/OH River area have really been missing out! Located an hour and a half from Indianapolis, Tanners Creek launching access is located in Lawrenceburg, IN. The Tanners Creek Launching facility is a real surprise. The facility has a very large parking lot that is well lit and there is parking for several hundred trucks and trailers. There are two launching ramps that are easily accessible to Tanners creek. There are mooring docks, trash cans, restrooms and other amenities. The Host hotel is very clean and the staff is very friendly. The Host Hotel for the Classic this year is the Riverside Inn, located at 515 Eads Parkway, US 50, Lawrenceburg, IN 47205. The Host hotel is about a 10 minute drive from the Tanners Creek ramp. There are plenty of places to eat close by as well. The Riverside Inn has also given our club a special price if you go down for fishing and decide to stay. All you have to do is show the Riverside Inn your Indiana Slab Masters Membership Card and they will honor the special discounted rate for their rooms through the classic.

Tanners Creek is one of 9 creeks that you can fish on the Indiana side with only your Indiana Fishing License. If you have your Ohio fishing License or Kentucky fishing license there are many more creeks available upstream for the Ohio creeks, and all along the Kentucky side of the river there are many creeks as well. Each one of these creeks have a different offering and types of cover. All the cover no matter how shallow seems to hold decent fish in this stretch of the river. As you run downstream on the Ohio it is surprising how clean the entire area is. The main river is no harder to navigate than any lake the club has ever fished on. The average depth on the Ohio is well over 40 feet deep, so navigating the area is not very difficult. If you watch your map on your GPS as you go downstream you will see the entrances to the creeks on the right side. When entering the creeks you may encounter a shallow spot near the mouth. This is not uncommon and usually only lasts a few feet and you will get back into fishable depths. Tanners creek is a very good creek for crappie. This creek runs upstream over 6 miles and has standing timber, lay down trees, stumps, and all kinds of open fishable water. Spider rigging can easily be utilized in most of the creeks.

The next creek downstream is North & South Hogan. These creeks have good populations of crappie and plenty of cover for them to hide. The North and South Hogan creek area has been a known tournament winning area in the past along with Laughery Creek. Another couple of miles downstream and you will find Laughery Creek. This Creek is a very popular creek and holds good crappie. Laughery Creek is a relatively deep creek that seems to get deeper as you go upstream. There are a lot of varying conditions you will find in the upper reaches of Laughery Creek as well.

A few more miles downstream and you will find Arnold Creek. Arnold Creek has a good launching ramp and parking lot, but during normal water levels there is not much water in this creek and fishing can be spotty at best. Not far downstream from Arnold you will find Grants Creek. Grants is a shallow creek but does hold crappie. The next three downstream that are all popular for crappie fishing are Goose Creek, Bryant Creek, and Turtle Creek. If the current on the river is not too strong, crappie can be plentiful on the main river as well. Indiana has a reciprocating license with Kentucky that you can fish the shore on either side of the river as long as you don't go up in a Kentucky creek without a Kentucky fishing license.

My advice for catching crappie on the Ohio River is to not be afraid to fish shallow. A minnow under a float fishing around stumps and timber is a simple tried and true way to catch good crappie here. Some of the winning techniques from Tanners Creek Indiana Slab Master Club Tournaments in the past have been spider rigging, swimming jigs, and vertical jigging. Sometimes it seems it requires tipping jigs with minnows as a competitive way to catch fish in the river. This is all very beautiful water and it is one of the best kept secrets in our state. Crappie in the Ohio River and its tributaries hold very large populations of crappie, and some of the best average size crappie of any lake around. I hope you get a chance to visit the Tanners creek area. Just think shallow and keep it simple and you may have some of the most fun you have had fishing in a long time!

PRIMITIVE BASS FISHING

Once again the lure of fishing for Florida's legendary large mouth bass has drawn me to Stewart Lake in the western pan handle. Located in Destin, this fifty acre lake is known for its population of hungry bass and the rugged terrain surrounding it. To the north are imposing structures 22 stories in height while the east and south skylines cast shadows 13 stories high on the surface of the lake. Surrounding the lower north and western shores are monolithic single and two story structures that add a sense of remoteness to the scene. Overhead, gulls and pelicans soar while fifteen miles northwest, Eglin Air Force base dispatches its daily flights of F-35 fighters on sorties over the gulf, the roar of their passage thundering off the surrounding structures, creating a perfect setting for exciting bass fishing.

Stretching across the middle of the lake is a man made structure called a boardwalk, complete with a gazebo at its center. This boardwalk is a popular walkway for the local part-time natives and their dogs who stroll across it at all hours of the day, making for the occasional exciting cast for the angler. The possibility of snagging an elderly lady's Pekingese on a lure adds a little threat to the possibility of an angler being whapped on the head by a cane wielded by an irate senior citizen. For the fisherman who enjoys a small element of danger in his fishing, the lake compares to any piranha filled body of water in South America.

I knew I was in for a good season when my first cast on January 2nd produced a 12 inch largemouth. Unlike the two previous years I decided to keep a score card as a record of the number of fish caught. By the end of the month the score stood at forty eight fish ranging from the size of a big hot dog to over three pounds. At the time of this article I've drug in sixty-three bass in a setting comparable to rush hour on Fifth Avenue in New York City. Unseasonably warm weather has kept the water temperature higher and the fish active, unlike previous years when colder weather produced fewer results. In addition, I paid closer attention to what lures other anglers were using and finally settled on a seven inch dark purple ribbon tailed worm filled with sparkly stuff. It looked like a possible ear decoration worn by the madam of a house of ill repute. But, it has been effective.

Like all prime fishing spots in remote areas, I found that I had to share space with other anglers who had also discovered it. It was considered as courteous to stop and ask the age-old question:

"Ketchin' anything?"
 "Yep. Caught a 12 incher."
 "Whacha usin'?"

"Black Rubber Grubber Bass Buster. You doin' any good?"

"Just got here. Gonna try a Purple Passion Sparkle Tail Bass Bugger."

As a rule, the dedicated fishermen, about a dozen or so who show up every day, begin their greetings by first names and fall into casual conversations on subjects covering everything from their golf game to politics to how their latest colonoscopy came out. However, it's sometimes difficult to concentrate on fishing as the boardwalk walkers stop and ask:

"Ketchin' anything?"
 "Yep. Just caught a forty pounder."
 "What kind was it?"
 "An Argentina red sand shark."
 "What kinda bait are you using?"
 "Argentina red sand shark night crawlers."

It wasn't surprising to see eyes widen and mouths formed into oh's, especially with the ladies from New York City who had just been spoofed by a Hoosier hick. I guess I should be ashamed of myself, but after all, they shouldn't be walking their dogs in prime fishing territory.

In one incident, I was retrieving and had just felt a fish pick up the lure when I felt a wet dog nose on the back of my leg. Flipping the bail to let the fish run and take the worm, I turned as the dog's owner tried to pull the pooch away. At that moment two ladies stopped close behind me and asked the owner about the breed of his dog. While they engaged in a conversation about canine species I couldn't set the hook for fear of whipping a welt on someone's head. I managed to inch myself out of the crowd, but the fish had apparently got tired of waiting for any action and spit out the worm. I was tempted to kick the dog and take my chances in outrunning its owner.

One day, after tiring of answering questions from curious walkers, I moved to the east end of the lake to try my luck from the bank. After a good cast and letting it sink to the proper depth I began the retrieve. A sudden stop felt like a big one had decided to take the whole thing in one gulp. I waited a few seconds and set the hook. The rod bent and I began reeling in, but the fish wasn't struggling. Just a steady but strong resistance. Anxiously, I finally drug onto the bank---an old beer can. Somehow, the hook had managed to slip into the teeny hole in the pull tab on top of the can. I sat down, pulled out my calculator and with the help of some of my favorite algorithms, determined the odds of that hook finding a hole no larger than 1/4 of an inch in fifty acres of water. The answer came out to be about the same as catching an Argentina red sand shark from a lake in the middle of a huge complex of high rises peopled by crowds of snow birds from New York City. ■

by Lonnie Snow

We were Freezin' for a Reason On February 25, 2017

Our Special Olympics, Liberty, Polar Plunge exceeded our expectations. It took 5 years to convince Indiana Special Olympics to allow us to host the plunge at Whitewater Memorial State Park. They feared we may not have the ability to have a successful plunge since our Area 9 Counties are much less populated by businesses and people. They did not expect us to meet the challenge they set for our first plunge which was a goal of 100 plungers and to raise over $20,000. To our surprise we had 118 plungers and raised nearly $25,000.

To start the plunge off, some Special Olympics athletes, plungers, volunteers, and our law enforcement, EMS, and Fire gathered at the Liberty Court House for a parade. The parade traveled to the plunge site which made a grand entrance with sirens and flashing lights. Our athletes enjoyed this as very few of them have ever had this kind of opportunity.

The weather provided us with a true Polar Plunge experience. It was near 68 degrees on Friday and dropped to low 20's on Saturday with a water temperature of 41 degrees. It was snowing and the wind was blowing. There was no room for the meek, with their favorite team or costume, on the adventure from the beach concession to the plunge site. The return trip was even more remarkable after surviving a dash or dive into the lake. The looks on the faces coming out of the water as they gasped for a breath was priceless.

We had 62 plungers from Wayne and Union Counties. Three teams from our counties were the Snow Bandits, (Team Captain Lonnie Snow), Chilly Dawgs, (Team Captain Alvin Day), and Dots Food Ice Cold Perfection (Team Captain Lacey Snow). DOT Foods, Whitewater Valley REMC, and the Richmond Knights of Columbus were our three main donors.

After the plunge everyone was invited to the After Splash Bash held at Frames Outdoors in Liberty. Here our plungers were invited to share a BBQ sandwich, desserts and some drinks. There was a silent auction held which raised over $2,400 and awards were handed out to our teams and plungers. Wayne County Snow Bandits won most money raised by a Team, with Chilly Dawgs coming in second. Lonnie Snow won the top individual raising the most money with Alvin Day coming in second. The Shelbyville Icers won the most money raised overall.

The Area 9 Special Olympics Team would like to thank you all for a very successful plunge. It is heartwarming when communities come together to support an event such as this for Special Olympics athletes. Special thanks go to the employees at Whitewater Memorial State Park who provided exceptional service to make this event happen. Frames' Outdoors was a wonderful place to host the After Splash Bash. The Liberty Fire Department and the Indiana Conservation Officers provided us a safe environment to plunge. Department and their youth Explorers' provided parking and security. The Union County Sheriff Department and Liberty Police, along with Ems units, led the parade out to the plunge site from Liberty. The Liberty Lions Club provided coffee, hot chocolate, and transportation for parking. Thank you Union County Development Corporation Director, Melissa Browning, for all your help in getting the Liberty Community and Richmond Radio stations involved in this event.

We are looking forward to next year. We hope to grow our event to 150 plungers and who knows what we can raise. We will be using part of the money raised to start a new Special Olympics Program in Union County. We will also be hosting our first Special Olympics track meet on May 6, 2017 at the Union County High School Track. We will be bringing 150 athletes to this event and are asking the community to come enjoy the event. We are looking for a minimum of 20 Union County High School students to assist with this event. They will receive a T-shirt and credit for Community Service.

In closing, the year 2017, has been unprecedented with these two special events for Special Olympics. Thank you, from all the Special Olympic Athletes. We are looking forward to the future.

Local Businesses who donated to our plunge were: Woodruff's Super Market, Liberty Lions Club, Ramey Plumbing & Heating, State Farm Insurance (Carl Sharp), Pollitt Pit Stop, Patriot Auto Sales, Frames Outdoors, Kroger's of Connersville, Knights of Columbus Lodge 580, Whitewater Valley REMC, Farmers Tanning, Frisker's Restaurant, DOT Foods, Whitewater Valley REMC, Buffalo Wild Wings, Miles Richmond Builders, Liberty Church of Christ, Edwards Memorial United Methodist Church, Liberty Bell Restaurant, Ray Dickerson (The Gad-A-About), Liberty Herald Newspaper, J's Dairy Queen, Kicks 96 Radio Station, Gilman's Home Hardware, Grove Vet. Something new for Smokin' on the Water BBQ Festival this year is a mystery meat challenge for BBQ Teams who want to participate. The Liberty Lions Club is trying to raise a little bit of money for "Operation Barbecue Relief. Which is a non-profit organization that goes around where disasters around the country have happened. The Joplin tornadoes is what triggered the people to initiate "Operation Barbecue Relief." It started out with the tornadoes out in Missouri and has included other disasters such as floods, fires or what ever the emergency is that food is needed there. Volunteer Barbecue Teams are going around to these events cooking food and providing it, not just for the victims, but also for rescue workers, the police, firefighters, first responders, etc. Their goal is so that everyone has at least one good meal that day. Operation Barbecue Relief has given out over a million meals for free. The "Mystery Meat Challenge" will help raise some money for Operation Barbecue Relief.

All those involved with going to the disaster areas do so by donating their time, they also pay for every expense they incur out of their own pocket. Donated money is what pays for the food they prepare for the victims. It is a very worthwhile cause.

Many of the barbecue teams that attend Smoke on the Water participate in donating money to Operation Barbecue Relief.

Smokin' on the Water BBQ Festival has barbecue contestants coming from Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Georgia, South Carolina, Maryland, Kentucky and of course Indiana.

They have a judge that hails from California.

The KCBS style of barbecued meat is recognized around the world.

So if you have an inkling to try your luck at barbecuing meat at Smokin' on the Water BBQ Festival, why wait. Sign up, you don't need any fancy equipment to begin with. As you work your way into the winning category, you will naturally learn better ways to cook and compete.

Civil War Relics Can Still Be Found

For whatever reason, people collect a lot of different items. Some collect coins or stamps, others accumulate old bottles or glass insulators. A few search for rare books, while occasionally you can find people who even feel collecting old matchbooks or pieces of string is fun. So when saving various memorabilia from different wars is someone's hobby, it's not that unusual.

We have a bunch of friends whose interest is finding and identifying relics from the Civil War. They got us interested in this hobby. While we don't have a lot of pieces, we have enough to show at school or scout groups or even at nursing homes. Some of those elderly people will even tell us stories about their relatives who fought in that war.

Part of the enjoyment of our collection is researching what the relics are, what they were used for and by whom. Certain items can be shown to be from either the Union or Confederate side. The easiest of these would be belt buckles with "US" or "CS" stamped in the metal. Often, buttons can be found which have a mark designating whether it was worn on an infantry or cavalry soldier's uniform. Other fasteners are marked to indicate which state the soldier came from. Even some of the lead bullets from that war can be shown to come from one side or the other.

But to us, the most fun part of our collection is actually finding these relics with our metal detectors. Granted, the sites for finding these items in the ground is becoming much harder. Three or four decades ago, many of our friends did a lot of research on Civil War battles, campgrounds, and movements along various trails. Of course, most of these locations were in southern states, but they found these areas, approached the landowner for permission and began searching with their metal detectors.

Back in those days, it wasn't unusual to find many bullets, buttons, harness buckles, and an occasional breast plate, belt buckle, canteen, and other fairly rare items. Now, most of those sites are hunted out with only a few small items still available for the detector to locate. Unfortunately, Susie and I were late getting started, but, we did find a few relics including several items dating back to the Revolutionary War while hunting in Virginia.

We still are able to add to our collection by attending "paid" or "seeded" hunts. We pay an entry fee to compete in metal detector hunts where various Civil War items are buried in large fields or woods. Paid entrants line up around the designated area and wait for the starting gun. We begin swinging our machines until they "Beep". A quick flick with our knife or digging tool and out pops a bullet or button. Sometimes, a nicer prize will emerge from the ground, but usually the bigger and better items will be on display on one of the tables. If the lucky participant finds a metal token with a number on it, he takes it to the display, matches his number with a prize and claims that item.

At our last relic hunt in Texas, some of the prizes were display boxes with 6 or 8 nice bullets, or several bullets with a great uniform button or coin from the 1860's. One of the tokens was redeemed for a sword in excellent condition, another for a 12" cannon ball which took two people to carry. Lots of other great prizes filled several tables. Susie won two of the display boxes with assorted items in them.

We have attended similar hunts several times just north of Richmond, Virginia. Each time, we both found about 100 items in the ground and occasionally a token for something bigger. Susie won her cannonball at a relic hunt. We were invited to a hunt in Mississippi last fall, but had a conflict with their date. We hope to attend it next year.

Besides bullets and buttons, we have found several types of knapsack hooks, small harness buckles, and other types of fasteners. Buttons are a fairly common find, even in fields in Indiana. We don't find many bullets here because there wasn't a lot of fighting in this state, but, the soldiers wore their uniforms home from the war and continued to wear them daily losing buttons for us to find. Most have an eagle with wings spread and often other markings. Some are large coat or uniform buttons, some smaller shirt buttons, and we even find tiny cuff buttons. Some are domed and some flat. There is a wide variety of buttons and books to help identify them.

We also find more unusual items with our detectors. When a soldier was injured, in place of anesthesia, the doctor would give him a bullet to bite on to help with the pain. Hence the phrase, "Bite the bullet".

Another unusual find is a piece of harmonica reed. These are metal, about an inch wide, and maybe four inches long when complete. Most of ours have been broken in pieces half that long, although sometimes they come out of the ground in one piece. We have also found two old wedding rings which were dated back to Civil War times.

Unfortunately, we don't have any of the more sought after pieces in our collection. No confederate belt buckles, or swords, although we do have a couple pieces broken off the end of sword scabbards. No bayonets or whole artillery shells can be found in our collection. We probably won't find any of those items where we search in Indiana, but we still take an occasional trip south with some other hunters. Maybe we will luck upon a site which hasn't be heavily searched and add something great to our finds.

Dixie Jolene, my deer recovery, shed and therapy dog!

by Brian Calvert

Four years ago I was going through a pretty tough time. I had recently lost a job I had for 19 yrs. I lost everything in a house fire, including my three dogs. Then when I didn't think it could get any worse, I sustained some life threatening injuries from a treestand fall!

Fast forward to the summer of 2016 when I finally had my life back on track, a new house, a new job and I was completely healed from my fall. The only thing still missing was my dogs that I had lost in the fire. I was finally ready for another dog! The three dogs I had lost in the fire really loved everyone, especially kids. I was determined to find a puppy that I could train to be a therapy dog and also had the look and demeanor that would put a smile on peoples faces, who needed it!

So I knew then I wanted some sort of hound. Who, could not love a hounds face with those big sad eyes and floppy ears? After some research I located a blue tick coon hound breeder in South Carolina, called Bluetick1Kennels. So I contacted them, picked out a female pup by looking at pictures and arranged for a friend who lived in North Carolina to pick her up and deliver her to me here in Indiana.

My girlfriend had no idea because I wanted to surprise her and everyone else. So I arranged a cookout at my house to unveil my new family member. Everyone was at the house when my buddy arrived. So I went outside and met my new pup for the first time. I fell in love with her instantly! I wrapped her in a blanket and took her inside for the unveiling. Everyone was surprised and a lot of tears were shed by me because of all the memories it brought back of my three dogs I had lost.

After thinking it over about what I wanted to do with my new pup, I decided as a tribute to the three I had lost, I would train Dixie to be a therapy dog. She could then help people, she could attend all of the expo's and other events I do and she could meet with the kids and people; which is great training for her being a therapy dog!

I am the Midwest pro-staff manager for Keyes Hunting Gear and we are always doing hunting expos, meeting and greeting people at hunting stores and I take Dixie everywhere with me. I immediately hired a trainer to get her started. I then also decided I would like to train her to recover deer and find shed antlers, since I'm an avid deer hunter. I found a group called United Blood Trackers. I started asking questions and joined their club. They told me to buy a book that their founder, John Jeanneny, had wrote that was basically a how to book on deer recovery, using dogs. I've since read the book twice!

To get Dixie started on recovering deer I started using a small piece of fresh deer hide by dragging it around the backyard and letting her find it by trailing the smell. We eventually moved to bigger fields and then the woods using deer blood, deer hooves, and deer liver. I drag a piece of liver making turns and angles while periodically picking it up and then dropping it again. I will then leave a piece of liver and a hoof at the end of the trail for her reward. I also use blood by making blood trails through the woods and spacing the drops of blood, mimicking a real wounded deer trail. The best experience for a deer recovery dog is to actually bring it on what we call a "sure find"! A sure find is when you've shot a deer and you know its dead, where its at, but you don't want to touch it until you bring your dog out to the initial hit site, then let it trail the deers scent until it finds it. You then let the dog lick and chew on your deer as a reward. In Indiana it is a state law that all dogs used on a deer recovery are on a lead at all times. I typically use a 25 foot leather lead.

All of my hunting buddy's know that if they kill a deer they are to call me so I can take Dixie to their location so she can practice her tracking skills! I also put deer scent on all of her toys so she gets use to the smell.

This past season was our first tracking season. Dixie was only 10 months old and still learning her tracking skills. We went 1 for 5 this past deer season, which isn't bad considering how young she is.

I've also introduced shed hunting to Dixie and

Deer Hunting / Past and Present

The Huge Improvement with Conservation and Technology

Let me start out by saying something that some of you vintage hunters probably already know. The whitetail deer did not seem to not be plentiful four decades ago. It was back in the 1970's there were not a lot of deer in the Cincinnati area suburbs. Most every Saturday when I didn't have to work, I would take my recurve bow, hit the woods and wonder about looking to get a deer in my view.

Mr. Irwin a farmer that had a small 106 acre farm, 5 miles away. He the property owner was kind enough to grant me and my friends permission to hunt. Things were friendly back then. A hand shake and smile was good enough to get us in. We respected that too. We loved listening to his stories. He always walked us around the property line and in every corner tree he would pull out a small 1/2 pint from a hollowed out tree. His land back then, was his so called "Man Cave" of today. Aka. (The SAC) commonly known as the Spouse Avoidance Center.

Things Change. Back then it was a hand shake and a smile, not a written permission slip designed by the government to get permission to be on some ones land. We have done that to ourselves, due to low ethical habits and hunting misconduct of those who just don't care or have respect of others property. That was a great time hunting there, but he allowed everyone that would ask and sometimes it did get crowded. During gun season you might have to take a ticket to park your truck. I hunted it during the archery season and had never used a firearm. Never even thought about it because I like bow hunting a lot and the pressure was off during that season.

My Story. Here we go.

It was always the same deal, one weekend take off in the early am, park my truck and walk. I would sit on the right side of a creek valley and see deer on the other side, out of bow range. So the next time I went to the woods I took the left side, and if I even saw a deer, you guessed it. Out of range. The deer traveled on the opposite side out of range. Probably smelling the bacon on me. Back then we hunted on the ground.

Between Billy on the left and Pat on the right is Leroy, my deer. Leroy, took 3rd Place-Historical Class 8 Point Typical Whitetail for that year. He scored 147 7/8" as a main frame 8 point and my biggest deer ever to date. (Photo by Glenn Kelsey)

Some guys would climb up a tree and sit in the fork on a wood 2x4 platform. That was stupid. That was not fun, was uncomfortable and too dangerous. No safety equipment or restraints. Lucky we came home uninjured or at all. Be Safe Out There! No Excuses!

Anyway, I would return home after a 4-8 hour day and my wife and kids would say, "Hi Dad, did ya see any?" Sometimes a yes and most of the times a big nope - nothing was my response. It was rare to even see a deer near the cities and outer areas.

Brain Storm Idea: After doing this year after year. One season my buddy said, "Why don't we try gun season?" Why not, I'm game for anything. I had a single shot 12 Ga. H&R shotgun. Just a field gun, basic as it could be. I shot clay birds at the local "Izaak Walton" conservation club and rabbit hunted with it too. So on Saturday, the last day of Ohio Gun Season we went to our local 106 acre farm. New Plan... This time the three of us boys split up. One of my guys, Billy, went to the left side. Then, Pat went to the right of the creek line. So I had nowhere else to go, but all way down to the base of this draw bottom. Here I was in blue jeans, red plaid shirt and orange pull over vest. No camo, what is that for? That was for Army guys, Right? I sat on a fold up camp stool from K-Mart, in a flat basin area, in full open woods. I figured between all 3 of us someone might see a deer.

Well, the sun came up it was a frosty morning and the shooting started not long after. Not a lot of shots fired but, it did wake me up. I did see deer running from across the road where the shots came from. Moving quick, I just watched the action. Again, too far, too fast for me to react. Now I was starting to see what this was all about. Sure, let the other guys get up and moving. Let them play dog. The heck with walking, you are better off sitting quiet and focused. So I sat there and waited and waited and waited. Seemed like forever. Day dreaming and clueless. I was snoozing off.

Just when all was quiet an hour later, I heard a noise, a branch snap to my left. Hey, it's a deer broadside and it's a big one. He, does not even see me. I didn't know what to think do or say. Now what! We both are close and I have to do something. As instinct would play from rabbit hunting, I shouldered my 12 guage and sighted the bead on the deer and squeezed off the only shell in the gun. I had 2 more back up shells in my pocket. How far? My guess, he was forty yards away. The buck reared up like a horse, took a couple leaps and hit the dirt. Done and down for the count. Now I'm shaking and got cold. "Buck Fever." So, I just sat there not knowing what to do next. My first deer harvest ever. Holy Moses. I could see the steam coming out of the buck deers nose as he took his last breath. He was just over the rise in the base area.

Well It was not long, maybe ten minutes for my friends to come looking for what all the commotion was about. They yelled for me, I told them I got one. As they came down the trail, I could hear them getting excited. "We can see his antlers from up here," they said. That's a great deer. I didn't know what I had. The boys, my friends hunted in Penn State before and they seen plenty of deer mostly small. So they helped me fill out the deer tag, then field dress the beast and then the work started. A long, two hour drag up hill to my truck. Today as always, I thank God for this experience, for my first deer and for my two friends Pat & Billy to guide me along on this memory of a lifetime. That afternoon I paraded around the city with the deer in my truck to show off my success. Neighbors thought I was crazy. We skinned the beast in my back yard tree.

I was hooked! A local taxidermist, a preacher, this guy was the one to go to. So I turned over my buck to his shop. Time went by, slow as molasses. I visited his shop almost every couple weeks for a year to see the progress. What takes so long? I got very nervous waiting for my mount. Again, first time at this deer stuff now I realized it all takes those guys time to process your mount. I'm not the only deer they have to mount. I had to name my deer "LEROY". All my buddy's and a large number of hunters I know, can relate to the name "LEROY" as a great deer. The guys would talk about big deer seen in the fields and reply, not a LEROY. After a year or so I had him professionally scored at a deer show.

LEROY took 3rd Place-Historical Class 8 Point Typical Whitetails for that year. He scored 147 7/8" as a main frame 8 point. Yes, that is a good score, real good. "Leroy" is my biggest deer ever to date.

Today forty plus years later deer hunting has grown to a huge multi-billion dollar industry. There are outfitters, tree stands, mechanical devises to assist shooting and retrieving your deer. Every week or so we get mailed ads for guns, ground blinds, optics, new archery equipment, camo clothing and scent control products. The list goes on and on with ways to spend your hard earned dollars on the sport we all love. You know what they say, "Boys and their Toys." If we want it we will find a way to buy it. Believe me, the retailers in the archery and outdoor sports business is big. I have to admit that these products have made the hunting sport a very competitive market for most of us. With the deer management programs and wildlife seminars to educate us and our youth, deer hunting is so much better than it was back in the day.

CONNECTEDAFIELD

My son Keith, his friend Mike and I got on the technology band wagon. The boys idea, they created a smart phone mobile app. Their vision was to create a tool for all sports people to share their experiences and have access to some very useful tools for the field and water. This quest required lots of work, money and time away from family to complete this Spring Has Sprung?

Mother Nature appears to have problems deciding what to do! My lilies and daffodils are trying to grow and bud. They were tall and happy one day, wilted and snow covered the next! I went out today and found that they had picked themselves up and were perky again. I don't even want to think about my beloved magnolia tree that appeared almost ready to bloom a couple of weeks ago. In spite of all that, spring will come and, with it, many great activities will take place in the valley.

By the time you read this, St. Paddy's Day may have come and gone. If my sainted grandfather were still here, he would expect me to be planting cold weather crops. (We Irish love our potatoes, cabbage, and peas.) I took one of those DNA tests, and I know that 22% of my genetic makeup should be telling me to plant what my Irish heritage calls for, but I don't garden much anymore. A few onions and some lettuce scattered in my flower beds will suffice, along with a couple of tomatoes in containers.

In truth, I don't need to garden. The Farmers' Market at the Courthouse will return Saturdays, May 20th and continue through October 7th. Hours for the market are 9 a.m. until noon. You can visit their facebook page to learn who will be offering their wares. I bought all my produce there last summer. Not just veggies, though! Cookies, sour dough bread, jams and jellies, and hand made local pottery and crafts are available! <https://www.facebook.com/Fayette-County-Farmers-Market-1560682170915865/>

Until then, there will be much to do. The Whitewater Valley Railroad will begin its season with Easter Bunny Express - Saturday April 15, 2017. The 17th annual running of the Easter Bunny Express will depart from Connersville's Grand Central Station and makes 4 round trips to the Easter Bunny Patch 2 miles away. Don't forget your Basket. Come and meet the Easter Bunny and hunt for his Golden Egg. The egg hunt is open to ages 8 and under. Reservations are recommended. Prices are $10.00/person ages 2 and up. Train departs at 10:01am, 12:01pm, 2:30pm & 4:15pm. Trains do operate rain or shine. Tickets are available by calling us at 765-825-2054 or by going online at <https://www.dynamicticketsolutions.com/wvrr/>.

If you're thinking of taking a hike or having a picnic - or both, the Mary Gray Bird Sanctuary is always open! It's such a peaceful place with beautiful woods, trails, and, of course, birds! I want to make it a point to get there this summer when they are demonstrating bird banding. I was intrigued last year to learn that they place tiny bands on humming birds, and I want to see how that's done. The sanc-

Generations of families have enjoyed the place. I have fond memories of camping there with the Girl Scouts, as well as all the reunions our family has held in the barn. Consider it if you're looking for a great out of the way spot for a get together! 3499 S Bird Sanctuary Rd, Connersville, Indiana, Call (765) 827-5109 or visit their facebook page for more information on events and reservations.

As we all know, Hoosier Hysteria has been in full swing lately. As of today, the Connersville Spartans are Sectional Champs, and the entire county is hoping for more victories for our team! Go Big Red!

Basketball is serious business in Indiana, but, in April, you can attend an event that takes a lighter look at the game. The Harlem Wizards are a show basketball entity delivering wildly successful fundraiser events for schools and nonprofits. They will be in Connersville to raise money for playground equipment at Frazee Elementary. This information was taken directly from their website:

What makes a Wizards show "awe-inspiring" or as the kids and teens say, "off the hizzle?" Some say it's the oohs and aahs created by the thunderous, sky-high slams. For others it's the humor and seeing the teachers being good sports and having fun on the court with the Wizards. The comedy, the audience participation, the spontaneity delivered as a world class show, in an intimate and community setting adds up to a night to be experienced and treasured.

The Wizards roster is full of amazing hoop talent. The Wizards have three units that crisscross the USA, with Eric "Broadway" Jones, and Dwayne "Swoop" Simpson, both former Globetrotter showmen, as well as the dynamic duo of David "DP" Paul and "King Arthur" Lewis a former Academic All-American at Bowie State University.

The star-studded, experienced roster includes Arnold "A-Train" Bernard, an accomplished trickster and a veteran of 7 years with the Globetrotters. Add in James "The Roadrunner" Tyndal who is fast enough to dribble thru New York City traffic, and Devon "Livewire" Curry who led his team to become the FIBA 3 on 3 US championship.

The slams come at rapid fire pace in the Wizards show. The roster features Lemarvon "Showtime" Jackson, the Wizards training camp slam-dunk champion. Add in veteran Leon "Space Jam" Sewell along with rookie sensation Jordan "Flight"

Southerland who both competed in the Sprite Slam Dunk contest during the 2015 NBA All-Star week in New York.

Harlem Wizards play April 7th at the Spartan Bowl. Game begins at 7:00. Tickets $10 in advance or $12 at the door. They will be competing with a roster of local ladies and gentlemen. Come out and enjoy the fun and support a worthy cause! Advance tickets are available at the schools, Fayette Regional Health System, and other locations around town. You can also purchase online at <http://www.harlemwizards.com/schedule-tickets/>

Work is progressing on the new downtown locations for the Whitewater Valley Art Association and the Fayette County Historical Museum. We're hoping both will be ready for visitors by the end of summer. Renovating structures and moving is hard work, but we are looking forward to offering even more attractions in our historic downtown.

So, as I always say, there's no lack of things to do and see in Fabulous Fayette County! Visit www.tourconnersville.com for more information! Hope to see you soon!

Dixie Jolene Deer Recovery

this is our first shed season we will be doing. I started her off with a rubber antler and antler scent made by a company called DogBone. The rubber antler is used with the antler scent to get your dog use to picking up the antler without getting poked and possibly scaring them from picking up antlers. After they figure out how to pick the antler up, retrieve and return them to you, you can then start hiding it and have them find it. Eventually you can introduce them to hard antlers.

You only want to use real shed antlers because antlers that have been cut have a burnt smell that you don't want your dog getting use to. You should also let your pup chew on antlers!

Dixie has been all over the place with me, from the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, the Indiana Deer Turkey and Waterfowl Expo, the Louisville Deer and Turkey Expo, numerous hunting stores, long jeep rides with the top down, fishing excursions, and numerous different hunting grounds across the state. Dixie and I have established a great bond and she loves getting out and meeting everyone from nursing homes to hunting expos. She just loves meeting people so be on the lookout for us. You never know where you'll see us, so stop by and see us. I'm sure Dixie will give you one of her trademark kisses and I'll answer any questions you might have about deer recovery or shed hunting with your favorite four legged friend!

United Bloodtrackers has phone numbers listed on their website for trackers in every state its legal at unitedbloodtrackers.org that people can go to and find a tracker in any state that allows deer recovery with dogs.

THE OLD SOLDIER

by T. E. Geisler

The old man was bent over and walked kind of slow,
 His eyes were down cast and his heart full of woe.
 Some say he shuffled as he walked just a bit.
 They knew him not when he was young, well, and fit.
 As he walked up the street and through the gloom,
 Not one knew it was a hero that entered the room.
 The war had been over for many a long year,
 But the old soldier remembered the pain and the fear.
 He remembered the shots and the men who had died.
 Some were friends who fought by his side.
 Others died that he never did know.
 Brave men now dead and placed in a row.
 In his mind this he still could always see.
 Why was it them? Why was it not me?
 Why must I live this over for so many years?
 When will my eyes quit filling with tears?
 I pray for those that died in the night.
 I lived through this Hell to make things right.
 Remember my daughter, remember my son,
 I did this for you. I fought and I won.

Times. This a story that tells about basketball when those of us who were attending school at that time remember basketball in Wayne County when it was the most popular. The friendships and the rivalry between schools. The sock-hop dances on the gym floor, cheer leaders, raising the American Flag before the game, the opening buzzer, the sound of running feet from one end of the Big Gym to the other. It often amazed me after a basketball game on Friday evening after closing the senior stand, going outside and it had snowed. Those of us living in Centerville also remember the rivalry between us and the Richmond Red Devils, it's been a long time since that time, but the memory is still there.

The Goal, The Towns, The Teams, The Times

Authored by Mary Lou Griffey, of the 300 copies printed in the first printing, 170 were sold in the first three weeks. Would you like a copy for your collection? The book tells the stories of the 12 towns of Wayne County from 1920s to 1963 when the 12 schools consolidated to just five. The Wayne County sectional brought all the schools together under one roof at Civic Hall in Richmond. And once in a while one of the "Davids" beat "Goliath."

The book is 312 pages with over 500 pictures. It is full color and includes memories and history of all 12 schools including Boston, Cambridge City, Centerville, Economy, Fountain City, Greens Fork, Hagerstown, Milton, Richmond, Webster, Williamsburg and Whitewater.

The book, The Goal, The Towns, The Teams, The Times sells for $50 which includes shipping costs. You can order by mail, e-mail or pick one up in person. Allow ten days for shipping by U.S. Mail.

BOYTIM CHARTER SERVICE
 LOCATED ON LAKE ERIE
 SKIPPERS BOB, LYLE & NED

I got a letter from my good friends Bob, Lyle and Ned Boytim the other day telling me that in 2016 the fishing on Lake Erie was great with better than normal catches of Walleye. The boys are looking forward to another great year on Lake Erie.

Skippers Bob, Lyle and Ned Boytim operate Boytim Charter Service. They are lifelong residents of Marblehead, each is a longtime holder of a U.S.C.G. Operator's License. Bob is 87, he is the eldest, followed closely by Lyle. Ned is the youngest, the business is listed in his name.

The Boytim's have three fishing boats: Bob's is the "Anna" a 28 ft Bertram, Lyle's is the Bethanne" a 32 ft BHM and Ned's is the Emily K a 32 ft BHM fishing boat. Our fishing trip was on Lyle's Bethanne, with Lyle at the helm. That way Bob could spend more time taking care of his guests every need. It worked out great, what a day we had fishing in Lake Erie.

I had a great time fishing with Bob and Lyle, also invited for the trip, since I was alone, Bob invited Roger Steidel from Medina, Ohio, Jay Bickley from Lakeshore, Ohio and Ray Steidel from Willowick, Ohio to fish with us.

Everyone caught walleye, but me that day. I caught 3 sheephead, which are fun to catch, but not worth eating. I wasn't surprised because I hadn't fished in years. Bob even had to show me how to use a open face spinning reel. I always used a closed face spinning reel years ago. But Bob, his crew and the other guys had a surprise in store for me, we'll get to that later.

As we headed back to port I walked to the front of the boat so I could look out the the front windows. Bob came up next to me and pointed out some things on the nearby islands as we passed them. After a while I asked him if we were back in Ohio yet, I told him I hadn't seen the two yellow stripes in the water indicating the border yet. He laughed and told me we were back in Ohio.

You couldn't ask for better Charter Boat Captains then Bob, Lyle and Ned Boytim. Bob and his brothers have been chartering on Lake Erie out of Marblehead since they were young men.

Arriving back at their dock everyone readied their gear to get off the boat. I quickly hollered at them that I wanted a photo of all of them standing at the back of the boat with their walleye.

Corporal Gerald Ivan "Bud" Shepler
1930 - 1950

My story begins here.....

Photos and Article by Ray Dickerson

Wednesday, March 8th, I stopped to talk to Steve Corrington owner of Steve's Marine about his ad for my April Gad-a-bout. In our discussion Steve mentioned again about a local veteran who was finally coming home from the war. He didn't have all the facts, but mentioned it because he knew I was always interested in veteran subjects. He told me the veteran was being buried in Dunlapville Cemetery. I thought that was odd, but dismissed the thought and continued on my rounds to check with other advertisers in the Brookville lake area. I was in the third day of the sniffles that steadily became worse. That night I sat up in my easy chair all night not being able to sleep, hacking and continually filling the trash can with tissues, I was building a mountain of them. It was the worse head cold I think I've ever suffered through.

At 8:04 a.m. I got a phone call from Melissa

Browning, Executive Director of the Union County Development Corporation telling me about a Corporal Gerald Shepler, a Korean War Veteran whose remains had been found and verified as being from Union County and would be buried in Dunlapville Cemetery at 2 p.m. Saturday, March 11th. She and another person said I would probably want to know about it. When I answered my phone she could tell I was a bit under the weather, so to speak. I thanked her for the information, but told her I doubted I could make it to the burial unless I could get some sleep. I asked if she could send me a photo, she acknowledged and hung up.

About that time Sherry was stirring so I traded places with her laying down in bed determined to get some rest. After finally sleeping for an hour and a half I got up, dressed and went to South Street to work on the April Gad-a-bout

The Veteran story bothered me, not knowing the facts. I dismissed it and knew I had to get April finished. I got in touch with Lonnie Snow asking if he had photos of the Polar Plunge, told him Jeff Frame had sent me a few. Lonnie sent me photos and article. By evening I was doing well, so I went home and slept like a baby Thursday night.

I got up early Friday, decided to find out about the Veteran. I googled all kinds of Veteran phrases trying to find a listing of the local veteran to no avail. Then I called four local Veterans to see if they knew anything about this one. I called Jimmy Johnson, Wally Dudek, Ron Hill and Joe Goebel phone numbers, but got no answer, left a message with a couple. Shortly Ron Hill called me and I told him what I knew, which was more than he knew, but he said he would call if he found out anything.

I went back on line and came up with <http://www.dpaa.mil/News-Stories/Recent-News/Article/1027031/soldier-missing> and the web page for Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency Fulfilling Our Nation's Promise "Soldier Missing From Korean War Identified (Shepler)"

Followed by "Army Cpl. Gerald I. Shepler, missing from the Korean War, has now been accounted for."

The Defense POW/MIA website had the following documentation:

On Nov. 29, 1950, Shepler was a member of Company K, 3rd Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division, on a reconnaissance patrol. Shepler was the lead scout when the patrol encountered an enemy ambush near Hajoyang-ni, North Korea, during which an enemy mortar round reportedly exploded within 10 yards of Shepler. Following the battle, Shepler could not be accounted for and he was declared missing in action.

Shepler's name did not appear on any list provided by the Chinese People's Volunteer Forces or Korean People's Army as a prisoner of war. Though no returning American prisoners of war provided any information concerning Shepler, testimony from witnesses stated they suspected he was mortally wounded by the mortar explosion. Based on this information, the U.S. Army declared him deceased as of Nov. 29, 1950.

Between 1990 and 1994, North Korea returned 208 boxes of commingled human remains to the United States, which we now believe to contain the remains of at least 600 U.S. servicemen who fought during the war. North Korean documents included in the repatriation indicate that some of the remains were recovered from the vicinity where Shepler was believed to have died.

DNA analysis and circumstantial evidence were used in the identification of his remains.

Interment services are pending.

I decided to look at Showalter Blackwell Long funeral home in Liberty to see if they had anything on Corporal Shepler on their website. Lo' and Behold up popped all the information I needed. I talked to Melissa Browning again told her I was feeling a bit better, but still didn't think I dare attend the funeral being so far behind on my April Gad-a-bout, would she send me a couple photos. She said she would, that was that.

I went back to work finishing up all the articles except the ones for my column, still pending.

I got up early Friday, 9 a.m. is early for me since I didn't get to bed until 2 a.m. Friday morning. By 11 a.m. I had decided to go to Corporal Shepler's funeral, for some reason I had it in my mind it was at 2:30 p.m., when actually it was 2 p.m.

I worked until 1 p.m., then dropped everything and headed for Dunlapville, driving south through Brownsville to SR 44 to Mt Pleasant Road to Alquina Road, west to Dunlapville Drive. Suddenly stopping for flashing red lights as the funeral procession was turning right onto Dunlapville Drive coming from Liberty at that time.

It was about that time I realized my mistake. The road cleared and I followed my turn onto Veterans who traveled to Dunlapville Cemetery wanting to participate in the burial of Corporal Gerald Shepler stand vigil holding an American Flag in tribute to him.

Two Indiana National Guard Ceremony Unit soldiers prepare to remove the American Flag that is draped over Corporal Shepler's casket and fold it for his family.

These two Indiana National Guard soldiers are folding the American Flag ever so carefully taking great care that the Flag is folded properly.

A Indiana National Guard soldier has handed the folded America Flag to Corporal Shepler's sister, Judith Ann Wood. The Guard is saluting.

Dunlapville Drive. The road had two American Flags placed at its entrance. A few feet onto the Drive sat a Union County Ladder Fire Truck with the aerial ladder raised with a very large American Flag draped at the top. I drove a short distance parking about half way between the fire truck and the entrance to Treaty Line Pioneer Village. I parked a distance out so I wouldn't be caught in a traffic jam trying to leave in a hurry.

I grabbed my tape recorder, camera and drinking water, then began the long walk to the cemetery. I had no sooner began walking when a small pickup stopped and the driver asked me if I wanted a lift. I accepted and rode with him, he parked inside Treaty Line Pioneer Village adjacent to the Dunlapville Cemetery. I retrieved my tape player from my pocket to record my benefactor who gave me the lift. His name was Tim Jobe, he knew me. In fact he said we had met before when I was working on a Seabee project concerning my father. Tim is a Navy Veteran Seabee served in Navy Construction Battalion (NCB) 5 during the Vietnam War. He is a member of American Legion Post# 122 and VFW Post# 1472 in Liberty, IN.

Tim parked inside Treaty Line Pioneer Village, there was a great number of vehicles, motorcycles and other vehicles parked there too.

I thanked Tim as he donned his Legion cap and I noticed things were moving swiftly now, the funeral was in progress.

I quickly found a vantage point and began taking photos. There were a great number of Veterans arranged around the east side of the burial site, Shepler's family was in their place under the tent. The Showalter Obituary included that Shepler's funeral would be conducted with full military honors provided by the Indiana National Guard Ceremony Unit, American Legion Post #122 and VFW Post #1472. All the units plus other Veterans were positioned on the eastern perimeter of the burial site each holding a vertical American Flag and pole at their right side.

Shortly six Indiana National Guard Ceremony Unit members positioned themselves at the rear of the hearse moving with curt commands from a seventh member. Ceremoniously the Guard Unit removed the casket and carried it toward the burial site, then placing it under the tent directly in front of the Shepler family, gathered there.

The funeral proceedings followed concluding with a prayer. The prayer was followed by a 21 Gun Salute to the fallen hero, than Taps echoed across the cemetery. Two members of the Indiana National Guard Unit walked toward the casket, one positioning themselves on each end of it. The two lifted the American Flag that had been draped over the casket and proceeded to ceremoniously fold the Flag. Once folded and the ends tucked tightly into the triangle, one Guard held the Flag while the other Saluted the Flag. The Guard holding the Flag then carried it and presented it to Judith Ann Wood, one of Corporal Gerald Ivan "Bud" Shepler's three living sisters.

The crowd was then told that the funeral had concluded.

As I turned to get ready to leave several of the Veterans who had been holding the American Flags and had participated in the funeral began leaving. I stopped them asking where they were from, they stopped and answered, Liberty, Anderson, Avon, Connersville, Richmond, and one from Hamilton, Ohio. I asked when they heard about the funeral, they mostly said early in the week. I thanked them for their service and turned to leave.

About that time a familiar face appeared. He introduced himself as Don Wood. He told me we had talked many times when he was involved with the Striper Federation at Brookville Lake, he knew a mutual friend, the late Dick Johnson. He said we had talked at the Indianapolis Sport Show on several occasions also. He lives in Indianapolis, but grew up in Union County. About that time he called to his brother Ron Wood and introduced him to me. I looked at him, then at Don. Don said, "do you think we look alike?" I nodded, Don said, "we are twin brothers, four minutes apart, age wise. I said, "I can see that." Don and Ron's mother is their Uncle Gerald's sister. They were only two years old when their Uncle was declared missing in action on November 29, 1950 in Korea. It was their mother that the Indiana National Guard person gave the folded American Flag to. There are three sisters still living Judy Ann Wood in Orange, IN, Peggy Atwell in

Operation C-LOV Begins in Centerville, IN

All Centerville residents will receive a piece of paper in their next utility bill which is not a bill, but rather news of an exciting new project called "Centerville Loves Our Veterans!" or C-LOV for short. Beth Treaster, Centerville Library director, explained, "Dan Wandersee and Jackie Carberry told me they wanted to do something in a big way to honor veterans. I was instantly on board because I still have happy memories of the program we had at the library two years ago to honor WWII veterans. It was the most profound, touching program the library has hosted. Dan, Jackie, and I, along with Kris Turner, our military expert on the library staff, came up with a plan."

The plan consists of two parts. First will be an ongoing project to collect and preserve information about Centerville veterans. A database with name, branch, and rank will be the central core, and preserved along with that will be oral interviews and photos. The second part of the C-LOV plan is to celebrate veterans this coming May. Various activities are planned, and for now residents are asked to save the date of May 27, 2017, at 6:00 PM. More details will be coming.

Anyone who wishes to submit a veteran's name and does not receive the survey form via a utility bill is asked to call or email the library, and a survey will be promptly mailed or emailed. Veterans may submit their own name, but also family members are asked to submit names of veterans who are deceased or no longer living in Centerville. The C-LOV database will include information about any veteran who has ever called Centerville home, no matter how brief their time was here, and veterans of any generation.

The library phone is 765-855-5223 or send email to read@centervillelibrary.info. Questions or ideas may be addressed to the library or to Dan Wandersee, Town Council President.

Announcing Centerville Loves Our Veterans What is Operation C-LOV? A project

- Find every veteran who ever lived in Centerville or Center Township, from 1814 to today.

- Create a database of veterans and record oral histories.
- Preserve this information for future generations; for events, displays, genealogy research, etc.

An event

- Save the date! - a parade honoring our veterans on May 27, 2017, 6PM
- During the month of May - banners of honor, a treasure hunt to learn where our veterans served, and more!
- Stay tuned for announcements!

Please help by completing the Operation C-Lov Information sheet as soon as possible the sheet is for yourself or any veterans you know.

Any war, any generation - we love our veterans! Thank you for helping us to never forget.

So they got back on board, Bob and Lyle reached into the giant cooler in the back of the boat picking up the walleye and distributing them while I got ready to take some photos of their catch. Photo at right.

Then Bob Boytim put all the walleye into a hand cooler filled with ice and handed the cooler to me. He told me they had taken a vote and wanted me to take their walleye home with me. I refused, but was overruled. Bob took me to his fish cleaning business, while we waited for my walleye to be readied for the trip back home he showed me around his business. Soon the walleye was filleted. Then Bob instructed me on how to keep the walleye fresh by freezing them in plastic bags in water, keep in the freezer. I did so and the walleye kept fresh for a very long time.

I got home fairly late, but tended to walleye doing exactly as Bob had told me. I had gallon plastic bags, I cut out the strip along the side of the walleye, put the walleye in the bag, filled it with fresh water and

BUDROE'S RESTAURANT THE DAY HENRYVILLE WAS HIT BY THE TORNADO ON MARCH 2, 2012

BUDROE'S BUS STOP RESTAURANT TODAY IN HENRYVILLE, INDIANA

MR BUDROE HIMSELF BACK IN HIS KITCHEN WITH HIS HELPERS

Back in the early 2000's I stopped at Budroe's Restaurant monthly. Then around 2003 Ernest McCleery began delivering The Gad-a-bout to Henryville and taking care of Mr. Budroe. I hadn't been in Mr. Budroe's restaurant since then. Top Photo: On March 2, 2012 a terrible tornado hit

Today, Now, when I come home from a day in the woods of Southern Indiana my family ask me, "How many deer did I see?" "Did I get one?" My answer is now usually, I seen several. Nothing I wanted to take, but I had a great time. I have my chances now and then to harvest the critters, but now I'm more selective as I have a freezer full every season. Because of DNR / state conservation / Deer Management programs, we all have better experiences in the wilderness. FHFH- are my friends and good volunteer people - Farmers and Hunters Feeding the Hungry are a missionary group involved in food pantry donations all over America. One deer can provide up to 200 meals for the needy. If you can, donate a deer. Please do it for a good purpose. I donate and promote every season that I am able.

Indianapolis and Connie Barrett in Richmond. (Side note, my wife Sherry told me she did Connie Barretts hair when she came to my wife's beauty shop in Centerville, some years back.)

Don told me about an interesting book he found in an attic, it was Gerald's 5th Grade Geography book which he had drawn military equipment on several of the pages. Don gave the book to his mom on December 9th. Later that same day, December 9th his mom got the call from the Army that they had verified Gerald's remains and was returning him to Union County for burial. She was crying when she called Don, he said the call from the Army was his mom's early Christmas present.

Walking toward Treaty Line I was stopped by Toby Wood from Orange, Don and Ron's brother. He told me we had talked earlier about the new gun law enacted for this past deer season and asked that I get in touch with him when I could. I told him I would.

Corporal Gerald Ivan "Bud" Shepler's Obituary:

Korean War veteran, Corporal Gerald Ivan "Bud" Shepler, 20, went missing in Korea on November 29, 1950. He was a paratrooper with U.S. Army Company K, 3rd Battalion, 187th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 7th Infantry Division. On that day according to the Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency, he was the lead scout on a reconnaissance patrol when they encountered an enemy ambush near Hajoyang-ri, North Korea. During the battle, an enemy mortar round reportedly exploded within ten yards of Shepler. Following the action, he could not be accounted for and the U.S. Army declared him missing in action.

Gerald was born in Union County, May 13, 1930, to Merle and Ruby Davis Shepler. He attended Union County Schools and developed an early attraction to drawing. A book of Gerald's drawings from the fifth grade shows army jeeps, airplanes and equipment. He enlisted in the U.S. Army on August 4, 1948 and on August 4, 1950 while on leave, he married the former Marjorie Smalley, who survives. Gerald's military decorations include the Purple Heart awarded posthumously to his family, Army Good Conduct Medal, Korean Service Medal with Bronze arrowhead device and three bronze stars, Combat Infantry Badge, and Parachutist Badge with one bronze star.

Among Gerald's survivors are his three sisters: Judith Ann Wood of the Orange community, Peggy J. Atwell of Indianapolis; Connie A. Barrett and her husband, Robert of Richmond; several nieces and nephews.

In addition to his parents, Gerald was preceded in death by two sisters: Iona Monzelle Fisher and Patricia Rose Sizelove; and two brothers: Thomas Davis, Sr. and Robert Shepler.

Public graveside services was conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday, March 11, 2017, at Dunlapsville Cemetery, Union County, with full military honors provided by the Indiana National Guard Ceremony Unit, American Legion Post #122 and VFW Post #1472, both of Liberty. Memorial contributions may be made to the Orange Christian Church, 7649 W Co Rd 400 S, Glenwood, IN, 46133. Showalter Blackwell Long Funeral Home, Fosdick Chapel, Liberty, was in charge of the arrangements. The Potawatomi Trail of Death is a Regional Historic Trail

Part 4

By Shirley Willard

All the markers were paid for by interested persons, groups, Boy & Girl Scouts – at no expense to taxpayers. Nearly 30 Boy Scouts have earned Eagle awards by erecting Trail of Death markers, and several Girl Scouts for their Gold Award. Several Potawatomi families have paid for markers as memorials to their ancestors. Markers have been sponsored by the Pokagon Band of Potawatomi, the Prairie Band of Potawatomi, and the Citizen Potawatomi Nation. Not all the markers are at the 50 campsites. Some are located along the route where the marching emigrants passed on the Trail of Death. Most are located at prominent spots where the public will see the markers, close to the actual Trail of Death route.

The last historical marker to complete the Trail of Death in Indiana was dedicated March 3, 2001, at the Wabash River on the Tippecanoe - Warren county line. It was sponsored by the Pokagon Potawatomi Elder Council. Like most of the Trail of Death markers, it consists of a huge boulder supplied by the land owner, Jim Crites. The dedication was attended by about 60 people. I acted as the emcee and Mrs. Evelyn Ball spoke briefly. Clarence White, Pokagon elder, gave the blessing. The 42nd Royal Highlanders Bagpipe Band of Lafayette played.

In 2005 we changed the Indian Awareness Center to the Potawatomi Trail of Death Association, continuing as a branch of the Fulton County Historical Society. Our new goal was to erect historic highway signs similar to the Lewis & Clark signs. The logo was designed by David Anderson, Seattle, a member of Citizen Potawatomi Nation. The first signs were erected across Fulton County by Manitou Chapter of Daughters of American Revolution, Rochester. In the next three years these beautiful signs were erected in all seven of the Indiana counties through which the Trail of Death passed: Marshall, Fulton, Cass, Carroll, Tippecanoe and Warren.

If you would like to help, contact me at 574-223-2352 or wwillard@rtcol.com. A sign costs about $60. They have to be erected by county or city highway departments. Usually the department furnishes the post and labor free. Indiana and Kansas are done. We are still working on Illinois and Missouri.

Indiana's Section of the Trail of Death

Everyone traveling US 31 has noticed the small sign: Chief Menominee Monument and an arrow toward the west at the south edge of Plymouth. This is where the Michigan Road (Old 31) meets (New) U.S. 31, and is part of the Trail of Death. Sounds terrible, doesn't it? A trail of death right down an Indiana highway! Some call it the Hoosier Holocaust.

The Trail of Death starts at Chief Menominee's statue, a huge stone figure of an old but majestic Indian. When I first saw it, I thought, "Oh, it is just an artist's conception of Chief Menominee and probably does not look like him at all." The clothing does not seem right for a Woodland Indian because the big feathered war bonnet belongs to the Plains culture. But when I took a picture of Paxico Wabaunsee, descendant of another famous Potawatomi chief, who was standing beside the statue, I was amazed to find that the picture revealed them having the same profile. Maybe the statue does look like Menominee. We note that some large respected museums have old "war bonnet" headdresses labeled Potawatomi so that may actually be what Menominee wore when he gave his famous speech.

People tell me they have a hard time finding Menominee's statue. They turn off the highway US 31 at the sign pointing west and drive and never find it. You go six miles and then turn north on Peach Road. The statue is about a half mile north after you turn on Peach Road, standing near some trees on the right (east) side of the road. It is surprising to find this beautiful statue in such a quiet lonely place. There are no houses near. The only sound is the birds and the wind and the tree leaves rustling. Across the road are cornfields and a red-tailed hawk circles overhead. The serenity causes the visitor to reflect on the spirituality of the American Indians. The words at the bottom of the statue tell about the Trail of Death and bring tears to the eyes of many visitors. A new historical marker was erected beside the statue telling about the location of Menominee's village at Wolf Creek, according to archeological evidence. This was erected in 2010 by Boy Scout Tylor Borggren.

To follow the Trail of Death, go north on Peach Tree Road, which takes you between the Twin Lakes. When you arrive at 12th Road, you are facing north toward an open field, once thought to be the location of Menominee's former village. To the left (west) about a quarter mile is a boulder with a plaque commemorating Menominee's chapel, built in 1827 for the Catholic priests who came as missionaries and baptized the Potawatomi. Father Benjamin Petit went with the Potawatomi on the Trail of Death and died on the way back to Indiana, becoming a martyr for his beloved flock. In 1850 Father Edward Sorin, founder of Notre Dame University, went to St. Louis and brought back Petit's remains to bury under the cathedral. Today the remains of Rev. Benjamin Petit and three other missionary priests are under the Log Chapel on the Notre Dame campus.

Turn right (east) on 12th Road and follow the Potawatomi Trail signs back to U.S. 31, cross the big dual lane highway US 31 and you are on Old 31, the historic Michigan Road. Follow the Michigan Road, a paved highway, south through Argos. (Argos was not founded until 1851 so was not there in 1838 when the Trail of Death took place.) Stop at the Tippecanoe River where the emigrating Indians camped the first night, September 4. This was a village called Chippeway, with a post office in William Polke's double log cabin trading post. Polke's white frame house built in 1832 was a mile north of the river. (Air-Vac built a new factory there in 1992 and donated Polke's 1832 house to the Fulton County Historical Society. The Polke house was moved a mile west to the FCHS museum grounds.) The Indian camps spread out all the way from Polke's house to the river, hundreds of camp fires to cook supper and breakfast. Apparently they did not eat lunch unless they simply carried left-overs to munch. Meals consisted of boiled meat and fried hoe-cakes of cornmeal or flour.

A metal sign by the Tippecanoe River for the Michigan Road was placed in 1925 by Indiana Historical Society. A huge boulder with metal plaque tells about Chippewanung Village and treaty placed by the Manitou Chapter of Daughters of the American Revolution in 1922. It states that the treaty of 1836 was signed a mile east of there, which would be in the wooded area west of the Haimbaugh round barn on Indiana 25. An old sycamore tree still marks the place, believed to have been bent by the Indians to mark the treaty site. The huge old treaty tree is in a woods on private property and permission is needed to enter.

On September 5, 1838, the Potawatomi were marched at gunpoint down Rochester's Main Street. An unusual memorial by the courthouse records the event, unusual because it has four boulders brought from each of the states the Trail of Death passed through, and a plaque with the story and a map. The boulder for Indiana was donated by Rex Bowen, Rochester. All the boulders were hauled by my husband, Bill Willard, with his truck. The plaques were sponsored by Potawatomi families who had ancestors on the 1838 Trail of Death, the family of William O. Wamego, and Susan Campbell, whose fourth great grandfather Chesawgan is mentioned in the diary. The marker was erected in 1995. A similar memorial consisting of five boulders was placed in 1997 in front of the Fulton County Museum, four miles north of Rochester on US 31. The fifth boulder is from St. Louis where Father Petit died, and the map shows his travel route and place of death.

The Potawatomi camped that night (September 5) at Mud Creek on Indiana 25 south of Rochester. There the first death occurred, a Potawatomi baby. George Winter sketched the campsite, showing cooking fires with iron racks holding small tin kettles and spits, wedge tents, and people sitting on the ground. In 1976 a huge boulder with a metal plaque was placed for the first death, sponsored by Boy Scout Troop 285. This was the Eagle award project of Allen Willard, one of my sons.

Follow Indiana 25 through Fulton and Metea, the latter named for a Potawatomi chief who had relatives on the Trail of Death, to Logansport. On the corner of Fulton Street, at the edge of the Memorial Hospital grounds, you will see a flat marker set on the hillside. This Trail of Death marker was erected by the Cass County Historical Society in 1988.

Another Trail of Death marker was erected in 2005, located on the River Bluff Trail on north side of the Eel River and east of Indiana 25 by the railroad tracks. This is south and across the street from the hospital. The sign and fitness trail were funded by the Memorial Hospital Foundation with donations from the public. The River Bluff Trail sign is beside a wooden bridge across Horney's Creek, where the Potawatomi camped Sept. 6-9 on the Trail of Death.

The Potawatomi camped at Logansport four days and celebrated Mass on Sunday with Bishop Brute and Father Petit. On Monday September 10 the forced emigration continued. George Winter sketched the Mass and a long line of marchers as they left Logansport, winding along the river bank toward the west. They did not cross the Wabash River but traveled along its north side. Leaving the hospital grounds, continue south but turn west (right) on East Miami Street just after the railroad tracks. Then follow the Potawatomi Trail signs, turn left on Third Street, right on East Linden, right on Wheatland, left on Front, right on West Wabash Ave, go under US 35.

To follow the Indian trail, go west (left) on Indiana 24, turn south and go under the railroad track at 400 West to Georgetown and turn west (right) at the river. Then follow Georgetown Road heading west along the Wabash River, continuing on it as it becomes Lockport Road and Towpath Road, following the Potawatomi Trail signs. A stone marker was erected by Boy Scout Crispin Andrews in 1997 where the Potawatomi camped at Winnemac's old village on Towpath Road and County Road 112 West in Carroll County.

About a mile further on Towpath Road is Burnett's Arch and historical sign on right for the boat bridge over the Wabash & Erie Canal. It was named Burnett for Abraham Burnett, the Potawatomi son of William Burnett, a fur trader. Burnett's Reserve was a large amount of land that he was awarded in treaties despite the fact that he fought on the side of The Prophet in the Battle of Tippecanoe. Abraham's adopted son, Abram Burnett, was a full-blood Potawatomi who was on the Trail of Death.

The route winds around on country roads, some blacktopped and some gravel, past the former blacksmith shop of Carroll County Historical Society president Lawrence VanderVolgen, who erected a wooden sign in 1988. VanderVolgen, now deceased, recalled that his grandfather told him the Indians passed through his field by the river. A metal sign was erected there in 1997 by Boy Scout Matt Trapp. This is on 800 West and 700 North.

To get back to the Potawatomi Trail signs, go south to 800 W and 550 N. The camp for the night of Sept. 11 was at Pleasant Run, a creek near Pittsburg. Boy Scout Kris Cannon erected a marker there in 1996. If you get lost, remember to follow the river as closely as you can. And consider yourself lucky, as you ride in your air-conditioned vehicle. The Indians were walking in sweltering heat, yearning for a drink of water. You can get a drink of water at Pittsburg's flowing well fountain in the center of town. Go straight through Pittsburg to 900 W and turn left. At 200 N (Bicycle Bridge Road) turn right, then left at 1000 W and cross the county line into Tippecanoe County.

Sept. 12, 1838, the Indians and their escorts passed by the Tippecanoe Battle Field, where some of the older men had fought 27 years previously in 1811. In 1996 a huge boulder from Burnett's Creek was placed near the Battle Field Museum entrance. A map and plaque were attached to the boulder by four Girl Scouts for their Gold award. The marker was sponsored by Tom Hamilton and family, descendants of Abram Burnett, a 26-year-old full blood Potawatomi on the Trail of Death.

At the Battle Field make a U turn and turn left on Prophets Rock Road to see the high rock where the Prophet is legended to have stood to watch the Battle of Tippecanoe in 1811. Then turn right onto Burnetts Road. Go to Indiana 43 and turn left, turn right on 500 N. The emigrating Potawatomi camped near Lafayette; the site is occupied by houses now. The historical marker is a boulder with a metal plaque located on 500 North between Morehouse Road and 225 West about a mile west of the Mt. Zion Church. It was erected by the Tippecanoe County Historical Society in 1988.

We don't know the exact route across Tippecanoe County but we figure it was near the Wabash River and Fort Ouiatenon. To follow the Potawatomi Trail signs from 500 N, turn left on Taft Road, left on 300 N, cross Klondike Road, right on Indiana 26, left on 325, right on River Road, cross Division road, left on 875 W, left on 950 S.

The 1838 diary records the next night's camp was at LaGrange, a town that no longer exists on the banks of the Wabash River at the Tippecanoe - Warren county line. In 1998 Kristy Young erected a beautiful marker shaped like an arrowhead for her Girl Scout Gold Award, but it was a wooden plaque attached to a small boulder. A mower hit it and knocked it off the boulder but it was rescued and taken to the Tippecanoe County Museum.

A metal plaque on a huge boulder was erected in 2001 for the LaGrange encampment. Located on the north side of 900 West a mile and 7/10 from 75 South, the boulder with historical marker is on the land of Jim and Beth Crites. The boulder has a metal plaque and a painting of an Indian head similar to that found on "Indian head" nickels. It was painted by Jim's sister Verna Yoder, an art teacher. The marker was sponsored by the Elder Council of the Pokagon Potawatomi.

Continue southwest in Warren County on Independence Road as it winds around by the river. This is beautiful hilly country. The Black Rock is a high ridge from which The Prophet was believed to have posted look-outs before the Battle of Tippecanoe. Follow the river but do not cross it. Remember in 1838 they did not have bridges so crossing a river meant everybody getting wet and risking drowning and losing supplies.

Approaching Independence you will see on the left Zachariah Cicott's Trading Post memorialized with a park. Inside the park entrance is a huge boulder with the words telling about the Trail of Death sand-blasted into the stone. John Henry and the Warren County Park Board erected the marker in 1993.

Go west on Independence Road to state road 55, then turn left on Indiana 28. Enter Williamsport on Old Third Street (this is Old Town and there is a new Third Street on the other side of town), go three blocks and turn left on Main Street. The Trail of Death marker is a metal sign on a post in the Old Town Park on Old Second Street and Main. It was erected in 1996 by Boy Scout Troop 344 and Phil High for his Eagle award.

Leaving Williamsport we are again unsure of the exact route taken to Gopher Hill Cemetery, the next night's camp. Follow the river - it is too far from the road to see it - but turn right on West Washington Street. Turn left on Grant Street, right on 400 S, left on Gillespie Road, cross Indiana 63. Turn left on 900 W, right on 950 S, turn south on 900 W. Turn north to Gopher Hill Cemetery.

Alternate route - You could go west to Johnson City and then south on 900 West to the old 1830 Gopher Hill Cemetery. A sign states that soldiers from Gen. William Henry Harrison's march camped there and some of his soldiers were buried there after the Battle of Tippecanoe in 1811. The Trail of Death marker at Gopher Hill Cemetery is a big boulder with metal plaque, erected 1999 by Ken and Ilene Smith, West Lebanon.

Gopher Hill Cemetery is only a mile and a half from the Illinois state line. Leaving Gopher Hill turn right on 950 S and left on 1100 a.k.a. State Line Road. Follow the Potawatomi Trail signs to Danville and on west to Kansas.

Imagine as you face west that you had to march for days on end, through heat and cold, on dusty roads, muddy roads, no roads to a God-for-saken place called Western Territory. There are people who truly love flat tree-deficient Kansas, but the Indians of Indiana spent the rest of their lives yearning for the wooded hills of home. Many came back in the 1800s and some came back to Indiana in the 1960s, including one named Tom Hamilton, a Citizen Band Potawatomi who found his way back to the land of his ancestors at a lake near Leesburg, about 20 miles from where his great great grandfather, Abram Burnett, was born at Chief Aubbeenaubbee's Reserve on the north side of Tippecanoe River in Fulton County. Hamilton has used his computer to generate the Trail of Death map used on many of the historical markers.

As far as we know, no one else from Indiana ever traveled to Kansas and tried to locate the Potawatomi descendants until we did in 1988. We learned a most amazing story about what happened to them after they arrived on November 4, 1838, with winter coming on and no houses. They must have felt quite dejected and unwanted, driven from their homes, like nobody cared. But they found that God had not forgotten them.

The year before they arrived, Rev. Christian Hoeken had established in 1837 a mission by Sugar Creek about 20 miles south of Osawatomie and by March of 1839, the Potawatomi on the Trail of Death had all drifted down there. Sugar Creek lies at the bottom of deep stone gorges and by going down below the stone walls, the Potawatomi found shelter from the cold winds. They helped to build log cabins for the mission, and a couple of years later, an elderly nun named Rose Philippine Duchesne was granted her life-long wish to be a missionary and establish an Indian school. She came to minister to the same Potawatomi who were driven at gunpoint from Indiana. They were so excited when she was still a few miles away that 500 Potawatomi went to meet her on horseback and on foot on July 9, 1841. Stories of her kindness and piety were told by generations of the Potawatomi.

Sister Virginia Pearl grew up at St Marys, Kansas. She recalled that her mother gathered the children "around the kitchen table and told us about her grandmother who was a little girl on 'a long walk' (the Trail of Death) and how she passed down her memories to her children of crossing a great river."

But mostly her memories were of a wonderful spiritual lady, a Madame of the Sacred Heart, who taught the children how to pray and the girls how to sew and how she came to be called "She Who Prays Always." The story is told that when they went to sleep at night, the Indians saw Rose Philippine praying and the next morning she was in the same position, still praying. Wondering if she really was praying all night, they put little pebbles on her long robe. The next morning the pebbles

Potawatomi Trail of Death

bles were still there, indicating that she did indeed pray all night. Down through the years many miracles and cures were attributed to her and biographies of her were published in 1954 and 1965. She was canonized in 1988, the first female saint west of the Mississippi River.

The local diocese bought 450 acres and in 1988 created St. Philippine Duchesne Memorial Park on the original site of St. Mary's Mission on Sugar Creek. The first time we Hoosiers heard of it was when we began planning the first Trail of Death Commemorative Caravan in early 1988. Father Robert Pool invited the caravan to spend the night at the park and camp out. He told us that volunteers from the Diocese were raking leaves and discovered rows of old rusty nails. Research indicated these rusty nails outlined the buildings of the mission, so they took white stones and placed them to outline the buildings. They made wooden signs naming each building: the church, nun's quarters, girls dormitory, boys dormitory, school, also signs that told of the Potawatomi chiefs. They made a 12- foot circular metal altar and erected a 30- foot tall metal cross. In 1989 Bob White, Overland Park, Kansas, built a stone wall to protect and display six wooden plaques of the Trail of Death diary - a gift from the Indian Awareness Center of the Fulton County Historical Society, Rochester, Indiana. White and other volunteers made seven wooden crosses with metal plaques with the names of the over 600 Indians who died there. They also made a map of the Trail of Death engraved in stone, the 14 Stations of the Cross, and memorials to various saints and Biblical events. It is a powerful, spiritual place to visit. We have been there several times. Each time we met more Potawatomi who had ancestors on the Trail of Death and the commemorations have been growing ever since.

The 1838 Trail of Death was a terrible experience and it remains a bitter memory for many of the Potawatomi, as do the other removals of the Native Americans from Indiana and other states. My committee has given so much of their time and energy and prayers to these commemorations to attempt, in some small way, to atone for the injustice and sadness of the past and to make known that we wish the Trail of Death had never happened. The Trail of Death caravans and dedications of historical markers have been a time of healing and an opportunity to appreciate the Indian heritage of America.

For Indiana's Bicentennial in 2016, the Trail of Courage Living History Festival has been designated a Legacy Project. Already we have succeeded in getting the Potawatomi Trail of Death put into three Indiana Bicentennial history books, along with a map and the logo of a Potawatomi mother with her baby on her back, following her man and an eagle flying over their heads. At the Trail of Courage we will honor members of the Citizen Potawatomi Nation who had ancestors on the Trail of Death.

The Citizen Potawatomi Nation awarded a grant to Potawatomi Trail of Death Association to digitize the 50 videos taken by volunteers during the six caravans. Susan Green, Rochester, a professional film maker, digitized them and made a documentary which tells what happened to them and how they have survived today, even though scattered "Like Birds in a Wind Storm," the title. This documentary is also a Legacy Project for the Indiana Bicentennial.

Our prime message is that the Potawatomi have survived. They are a kind, loving, intelligent people, whose strength and courage has enabled them to overcome difficulties, face the future and bring a special spiritual blessing to wherever they live.

"Let us tell the stories of the past and vow never more."
